For this 11th edition, 12 young directors and students in art and filmmaking have been selected. They are coming from Algeria, Czech Republic, France, Germany, Ireland, Lebanon, Palestine, Spain, Taiwan and Tunisia.

Some of the former FIDCampus participants have made significant steps forward in their career after they took part in our training program. For example, Drifa Mezzener (FIDCampus 2013) participated since in Berlinale Talents, Jean Boiron-Lajous (FIDCampus 2013), Marko Grba Singh (FIDCampus 2014) and Elsa Brès (FIDCampus 2016) presented their films in recent editions of the FIDMarseille (First Competition, Flash). In the previous editions, professionals such as: Caroline Champetier (director of photography), Yann Dedet (editor), Dominique Auvray (editor and filmmaker), Nicolas Becker (sound designer), Claire Atherton (editor), Rania Stefan (filmmaker and editor) and film directors like Valérie Jouve, Ghassan Salhab, Marie Voignier, Raed Andoni, Alice Rohrwacher, Oliver Laxe, Phillip Warnell, Kamal Aljafari, Narimane Mari, Payal Kapadia and Miguel Gomes. They all were invited to share their experience with our FIDCampus participants.

For this 11th edition, our loyal mentor Caroline Champetier, DOP and filmmaker will be joined by curator and filmmaker Shai Heredia and sound editor Romain Ozanne. The three of them will guide the young directors through two days of critique sessions in which the film of each participant will be discussed and analyzed.

They will get an overview of funding and co-production platforms and will also get to attend specific network meetings with numerous international professionals of the film industry (filmmakers, producers, programmers among others).

Caroline Champetier

Among the highest active cinematographers, Caroline Champetier has received numerous awards including the César for Best Photography and the Gianni di Venanzo Prize for Des Hommes et des Dieux (2010) by Xavier Beauvois in 2010. She won a Silver Frog at Camerimage for her work on Holy Motors (2012) by Leos Carax, which was also nominated for a César for Best Cinematography in 2013, for Les Innocentes (2016) by Anne Fontaine in 2016 and for Les Gardiennes by Xavier Beauvois in 2017.

The radiance of the skin, its transparency and its mystery, is a recurring source of inspiration in the work of Caroline Champetier. It is a common thread leading to an almost physical immersion in the image, technology and art, to always better serve the vision of the director and highlight the actors. Caroline Champetier has shot nearly a hundred films as assistant and then director of photography.

She began her career working with Chantal Akerman on Toute une Nuit (1982), starring Aurore Clément, and went on to make several short films and feature films with Jean- Luc Godard.

Romain Ozanne

Sound editor | re-recording mixer

Romain Ozanne works as a re-recording mixer and a sound editor since 2014. He followed an academical and technical education, first following an intensive foundation degree at Ciné Sup in Nantes, then at the University Paris III and at the Louis Lumière school in Paris.

He developed an interest in sound very early, which actually evolved from his passion for music. His encounter with cinema comes later, after high school, as he realizes how sensitive and political the gaze of the films could be.

Another inspiration that sparked his interest for sound comes from Tariq Tegua or Apichatpong Weerasethakul work, with the richness of their aesthetic propositions and their work on sound dynamics. Romain Ozanne is interested both in the complex sound design brought by fiction, and in the more immediate set ups that documentaries can allow. His work touches upon various economical environments, with special attention to design created through location sound. He strongly supports independent cinema in all its diversity and forms.

He now lives in the Pyrénées Mountains, in the Nouvelle-Aquitaine region.

Notably, he worked with Maxime Martinot Trois contes de Borges (2014), Le sentier des Asphodèles (2023), Nicolas Peduzzi Ghost Song (2021), Camille Degeye (Journey Through a Body (2019) Almost a Kiss (2022), Dominique Marchais La Rivière (2023), and more recently with Qiu Yang Some Rain Must Fall (2024), Antoine Vazquez Pédale Rurale (2022) or Payal Kapadia A Night of Knowing Nothing (2021) All we Imagine as Light (2024).

Detailed Program

Ingrid Caven

“The rare mystery of certain presences on stage was the most important thing, much more important than what we call a life.”

Jean-Jacques Schuhl, Ingrid Caven, 2000.

So says the writer about the woman who shares her life. This rare mystery is also the mystery of Ingrid Caven’s presence on screen, from Rainer Werner Fassbinder’s first films in the late 1960s to those she still plays in five decades later. This is the mystery of beings who never allow themselves to be domesticated, whose aura transforms and transfigures the image or song that receive their brilliance.

Ingrid Caven sings, but she is more than a singer: since her first show in 1976, staged by Werner Schroeter, each of her performances has been the invention of a new form, electric shortcuts through the history of singing. Breathtaking vocals and acrobatic gestures, risky figures on a tightrope between extremes, from Brahms to Kraftwerk, from the street to opera. Ingrid Caven acts, but she is more than an actress. A subversive iconic figure for the public, – she was a force of inspiration and an incomparable work partner for some of the greatest filmmakers of the ‘70s – Schroeter, Fassbinder, Schmid.

From June 25 to 30, Ingrid Caven will be guest of FIDMarseille for a program retracing over fifty years of acting and singing. Masterpieces by Eustache (My Little Loves), Schmid (La Paloma), Fassbinder (In a Year of 13 Moons), rare and/or little-known films, never-before-screened filmed performances, surprise listening session, encounters...

Joana Pimenta & Adirley Queirós

For the past twenty years, Adirley Queirós has been making cinema with the inhabitants of Ceilândia, a satellite city of Brasília. Since Rap, O Canto da Ceilândia (2005), each film is invented as a prototype, combining documentary material and fictional energies to invert the relationship between the center and the margin. Real and fake archives, anticipation and dystopia, local radio and urban music: a minority people revives the political power of cinema to imagine their memory, to portray their anger and their hope for change.

Joana Pimenta is Portuguese and works between Brazil and the United States. She has made two highly acclaimed short films which, in an entirely different language – that of the experimental essay – join the Brazilian filmmaker on a common territory: that of (colonial) counter-history and fictionalized memory.

In 2017, Adirley Queirós invited her to work as director of photography on Era uma vez Brasília. After co-directing the incendiary Mato seco em chama in 2022, they are now pursuing an ever closer collaboration. Collective tales to shape history, counter segregation and invent uprising: it's this necessary artistic and political ambition that we are delighted to present and reflect upon in the company of Adirley Queirós and Joana Pimenta.

Agathe Bonitzer / Sophie Fillières

Agathe Bonitzer has played alongside Ingrid Caven in Belle dormant (Sleeping Beauty) by Adolpho Arrietta (2016). She is intriguing and fascinating in one of the most beautiful films of recent years, Music, by Angela Schanelec.

Since Agathe Bonitzer is a young actress, the aim is not to pay tribute to her, nor to celebrate her career with a retrospective. There will be no question of a career, as her filmography is built on other requirements. Those of a cinephile actress, passionate about the history of cinema and concerned about its future, attracted more by the work of filmmakers than by the performances they offer her. So what is it all about? Work. Taking stock of the work of a young actress today. Entering the world of film and cinema through the words and work of an actress.

Agathe Bonitzer has played in several films by an immense filmmaker, the discreet author of one of the most precious works in French cinema: her mother, Sophie Fillières.

Sophie Fillières six feature films have profoundly renewed the art of comedy, with brilliant dialogues and cracked characters serving up a funny yet desperate examination of the things of life. She died just after shooting the seventh movie, and asked her children to finish her project.

Agathe Bonitzer will be present throughout the week to accompany this program, which includes films she starred in and a tribute to Sophie Fillières. In partnership with the Cinémathèque Française, which is devoting a complete retrospective to Sophie Fillières in September, coinciding with the theatrical release in 2024 of Ma vie ma gueule (This Life of Mine).

FIDLab 2024 | 16th edition

FIDLab – the international coproduction platform of the FIDMarseille – is driven by the conviction of offering a space of support and development to contemporary cinema. Which, in an increasingly demanding international context, continues to invent and take risks. FIDLab is designed to offer dynamic meetings with producers, support funds, broadcasters, distributors and sales agents.

For FIDLab 16th edition (27-28 June), ten projects have been selected among more than 410 submissions, regardless of format, length or subject, whether fiction or documentary, at the scripting, development or production stage. The selected projects represent 14 countries: Germany, Argentina, Canada, Spain, United States, France, the Azores Islands, Italy, Japan, Niger, United Kingdom, Slovenia, Sweden, and Turkey. This geographical diversity, combined with the uniqueness of the creative approaches, creates a selection where a multitude of issues and themes intertwined. The two winning projects from the Joaquim Jordà Residency – a residency initiated in 2022 between the Reina Sofia Museum (Madrid), DocLisboa and FIDMarseille – will be highlighted alongside the 10 selected projects.

Director

Malou Six is a filmmaker and PhD student. She was introduced to film techniques through analog photography and projection in associative places such as La Clef Revival in Paris and Le Videodrome 2 in Marseille.

She then joined the Labo L'argent, a collaborative laboratory, where she hand-developed the super 8mm shots from her short documentary Corps Tannés (2024). She tries to link her artistic practice to her research.

Her PhD studies focus on the poetics and politics of artisanal and alternative practices within contemporary film production in France. She is also a member of a collective of women directors, with whom she is currently co-writing a feature-length fiction film.
